LABOR DAY IN CITY COURT
Carpenter and Baker Families Well Represented.

Just to give it a touch of local color yuh know, and as an appropriate setting for Labor day, two members of the Carpenter family, Sam and Perry, and three members of the Baker family, Frank, Henry and Theodore, graced the docket at the city court this morning. Along with them was John Sample and all were up on charges of public intoxication. Of course—all five admitted having taken several glasses.

The quintet pleaded guilty and were given $5 and costs apiece.

Fred Lutz, a Fort Wayne man, also graced the court that it was Labor day. He was arrested Sunday on a complaint from a neighbor with whom he tried to discuss labor troubles. He called the neighbor a scab, and the neighbor rang for the wagon. Lutz pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct and was fined $25 and costs. Lutz declared he was pleading guilty, but would file a few affidavits himself later.

Ralph Miller, Louis Pope, George Wolf and John Ross, transients, who were picked off of a Wabash train by Officer Boothby were let go. All of the men had trades and were enroute to new jobs, without funds, when they were picked up.

Charles Scervance, arrested with four above, had his case held over until Wednesday under $200 bond at the request of the authorities.

$100 AND SIX MONTHS.

Child Neglector Given a Heavy Sentence For Failure to Keep Family. A fine of $100 and a sentence of six months at the county farm was all that George Matthew McNeal got at the city court this morning for failing to support his wife and child. McNeal was brought here Sunday from Cleveland by Detective Sergeant Walter Immel. McNeal has just been released from the Cleveland work house, where he had been serving a sentence for neglect of a child by a former marriage at that city.

McNeal had been arraigned here before, had made one payment to his wife and then skipped to Loraine, Ohio, from which place he went to Cleveland. McNeal left his wife here nearly a year ago, after having married here in May, 1918. Since the separation he had not contributed to her support, it was brought out.

A charge of child neglect against Arthur Houck was dismissed when he produced receipts showing that he had made satisfactory payments to the court.

GIRLS MAKE STATEMENT

Misses Pranger and Longworthy Give Explanation.

Misses Grace Pranger and Melissa Langworthy, taken in custody last Saturday night at the time Joe Stuckey was arrested on the charge of automobile stealing and later released, desire to have their names cleared of any connection in the affair and have made a statement setting forth in detail just how they became involved.

"In view of the widespread publicity given the recent apprehension of the nine automobile thieves, we feel that in justice to our numerous friends and ourselves that an explanation of our part in the matter would serve to vindicate our participation in the affair.

"Last Saturday morning, upon the invitation of Miss Langworthy, I went to Toledo to visit Miss Langworthy's parents, purchasing a round trip ticket over the Wabash.

"During our visit on Saturday, we met Mr. Joe Stuckey, whom Miss Langworthy had known for a long time and considered a respected friend. Mr. Stuckey suggested that we make the return trip to Fort Wayne by automobile as he was driving through on the following day. Upon learning that the trip was to be made by daylight and that no unconventionality could be attached to such a venture, we readily consented and left on the following day (Sunday), together with Mr. Craig, who was a friend of Mr. Stuckey, and to whom we had been properly introduced. The first information we had that all was not right was when we were stopped at Leo, about six o'clock in the evening by the officers who detained us as witnesses, as per the daily paper. Upon learning our innocence we were immediately exonerated, but the papers that played the affair up so highly, neglected to state our circumstance and we have been anxious to acquaint our friends with the facts."

The Wishing Plane

By WILLIS WINTER

When Captain Brave told the pony man that the captain and Jack would ask Ladydear and Jane to another day so that Jack and he could go with the fisherman, the pony man hurried over to the boat to arrange with the fisherman to take them along. Jack thought they would start the next morning, so he was a surprised boy when the pony man on his red told them they would have to hustle back to eat unless they wanted to start on the trip hungry. Ladydear and Jane had wandered a little way down the dock. The captain and Jack called to them and walked toward them. Of course Jane and Ladydear said they'd just as soon spend the night and another day on the island. The pony man told them that his wife would be glad to have them stay at their house, so they all walked back to the pony farm. Jack couldn't imagine why the fisherman started out at night. The pony man soon told him, though, that he had always been the custom of the saloon, sail out to the fishing grounds, stay there all night hauling in the fish and then sail home the next morning. There were a lot of reasons, but they were all about things that Jack wasn't very familiar with.

Before long Jack, the captain and the pony man were back at the dock and had climbed on board the boat. The pony man told Jack the names of all the sailors. The captain was named McGregor. He was a broad-shouldered man with great big arms, big hands and a gruff voice. Jack might have been somewhat timid if the captain hadn't had such a pleasant smile and a merry twinkle in his eyes when he looked at Jack.

There were Johnson, Baird, a funny little fellow everybody called "Bober," because he was always bobbing up at unexpected places around the docks, and two other sailors. They had made everything ready by the time Jack and his friends arrived and in less time than it takes to tell had hauled up the sail and were slowly gaining speed as they started out of the little harbor among the cliffs.

Jack was sure that he was going to have a wonderful night. It was a long way out to the fishing grounds. Captain McGregor and the other men took turns explaining things about the boat and about sailing and fishing to Jack. When his questions ceased they told him stories of the fishermen they knew. Most of the stories were of great storms that had swept the North sea wrecking boats and drowning many of the men on the boats. Each storm had its hero.

The story that appealed most to Jack, though, was one about Captain Sammons. Maybe it was because there was a little boy in the story. Captain McGregor told the story, and tomorrow I'll tell you just what Jack heard.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDY ADVISED FOR ROSE AND HAY FEVER

Anyone Can Make a Pint For Trifling Sum and Used In Time May Prevent Annual Attack.

"No matter how severe your yearly attack be, No matter how distressing or humiliating— Its intensity can be reduced to a harmless, mildness," says a Kentucky druggist who believes from what he has seen that this simple home made remedy is a most important discovery.

He has seen the most severe and apparently unconquerable cases reduced to what might be called a mild cold in twenty-four hours. In many cases where the patient started treatment a week or ten days before the expected attack the unwelcome yearly visitor failed to appear with anything like its usual intensity.

People who want to try this new treatment can make a pint in a few minutes. Pour one ounce of Mentholized Arcline into a pint bottle then fill the bottle with water that has been boiled. Gargle daily as directed and sniff or spray the nostrils twice daily.

That's all there is to the treatment which so many sufferers have found to be a true friend.

Mentholized Arcline in one ounce vials is dispensed by all the better pharmacies.

EDISON LAMP PICNIC DRAWS LARGE CROWD
More Than 1,000 Attend Big Events of the Afternoon and Evening.

WILL BE ANNUAL AFFAIR

More than 1000 people gathered at Edison park to attend the picnic of the Edison Lamp works, Saturday afternoon and evening. The baseball game was played on the grounds while the evening was given over to dancing and vaudeville. The picnic was a success in all respects as evidenced by the number attending to the park.

and who won the game is still unknown. It is claimed that the Thunderbolts, known on the grounds as Green Sox, won the event over the Lightning Bolts, more commonly designated Red Sox, in an unknown inning game with an unknown score. Elsie Banet pitched the winning ball and was supported behind the bat by Angelina Woenke, as catcher. The other Green Sox were Beulah Pfeiffer, first base; Verna Thompson, second; Blanch Bennett, third; Ruth Romary, short stop; Irene Gebhart, right fielder; Hilda Smith, center; Velma Rankin, left. The heavy stick work of Velma Thompson and Beulah Pfeiffer beat the Red Sox, with out a doubt. Fern True, pitcher and Elsie Mahan, catcher for the Red Sox were supported by Virginia Rogers, first; Rosella Dollinger, second; Genevieve Tannhill, third; Lois What, short stop; Verdilla Rogers, right field; Irene Tolan, center, and Mary Snyder, left.

The other events of the day created considerable stir on the grounds. The girls' contests were held in the forenoon and the afternoon and consisted of various races. The results of the contests follows: Fifty-yard dash, girls under 18, Irene Swank, first; Lucy Miller, second; Thelma Barthwaite, third. Fifty-yard dash, girls over 18, Elsie Banet, first; Rosella Dollinger, second; Florence Rankin, third. One hundred yard race, Mary Gase, first; Hilda Smith, second; Elsie Banet, third. Shrinkage race, Florence Rankin, first; Velma Rankin, second; Marie Hommberger, third. Velma Rankin won the coat race, and Lillian Smith and Lillian Leddy followed second and third. Ruth Romary, Margaret Snyder and Mary Hommberger were the first three to cross the line in the sack race. Some of the contestants failed to cross the line at all in this event. The heavyweight fifty-yard dash was won by Mary Snyder, Salome Mack and Agnes Bailey taking second and third. The hobble race was restricted to teachers only and was won by Amanda Smith with Ruth Romary and Salome Mack following close second and third.

The married men were pitted against the single men in a hard-fought baseball game resulting in a victory for the married men with a score of 18 to 14. As is customary the umpire received a due amount of ragging. It is claimed that when pressure was brought upon him making decisions, Ed Bailey seemed to be implicated in the intrigue to influence the umpire Superintendent J. W. Anspach turned single man in the latter part of the game, but too late to save the day. Jackson and A. Rosenberg of the single men's team, were supported by Mooney, Walker, Redding, Meritz, Smith, Noble and C. Rosenberg. The married men's line-up was as follows: Morrow, Bayley, Smith, Cartwright, Lindley, Rogers, Keesberry, Watkins, Goodland and Morrell, and Rusher. The game was played with indoor base ball and bat, with 60 foot base lines.

GARY REFUSES TO MEET STEEL UNION

Elbert H. Gary.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the U. S. Steel Corporation, has refused to confer with members of the Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers' union on the demands made recently in regard to new wage scales and working conditions. Judge Gary says the directors of the steel industry believe in the open shop, and will deal only with individual employees.

The results of the other contests of the men follow: The tug-of-war between the married men and the single men resulted in a walk-away for the former Cartwright and Rosenberg won the three-legged race. Ed Bayley won the hobble race which was restricted to foremen. Ed Bayley was also first in the running high jump, 100 yard hurdle and running broad jump. Victor Cartwright took first in the heavyweight fifty yard dash, the weight requirement being 190 pounds or more.

The basing department holds the championship of the day as determined by the points won by both girls and men of the different departments, Bayley winning 20 of the 27 points that took the championship. The anchoring department followed closely with 22 points, with the exhaust department taking third, holding 10 points.

Metals furnished by the company were given to the winners of the events held throughout the day. The entertainments held in the evening were highly appreciated. The program was arranged and given by the Edison employees, the dancing being under the management of local talent.

"IT'S NOTHING SHORT OF REMARKABLE," SHE SAYS

Mrs. McNabney Gains Twenty Pounds After Taking Tanlac

SUFFERED TEN YEARS

I've not only gained twenty pounds since I began taking Tanlac but for the first time in ten years, I can sit down at the table and eat anything I want without any suffering afterwards," recently declared Mrs. Emma McNabney of 209 South Oriental street Indianapolis Ind.

"Nobody knows how I suffered with my stomach," she continued. "Nearly everything I ate would sour and form gas, that would blow me up so I could hardly stand it. It seemed sometimes that my heart would almost stop beating and then all of a sudden, it would start racing so fast I could hardly get my breath. I tell you it was awful. I had terrible pains in the pit of my stomach and through the rest of my back, and I was always having to take something for constipation. I also suffered nearly all the time with sick headaches and sometimes these would last for a week or more without stopping a minute. I was as nervous as I could be and would wake up at the least little noise all during the night."

"I tried everything I could think of but didn't get any better. No medicine or treatment seemed to do me a bit of good and I just kept going down and losing weight all the time. I got to where I lived on cereals, toast, milk and eggs. I didn't dare to eat anything heavy and I got so weak I could barely attend to my duties around the house and look after my children."

"Finally I decided to try Tanlac. After reading so many statements from people praising it, and I think it's nothing short of remarkable that this medicine has done for me. I began to improve on the first bottle and, while I know it's hard to believe, it's the honest truth that after taking four bottles I can eat anything without suffering at all. Why now I don't think anything of eating fried potatoes, meats, tomatoes and even cucumbers, things I haven't touched in years before. It all agrees with me and I've already gained twenty pounds. I don't have any gas now or pains of any sort in my stomach, or my back. I'm not constipated any more, either. All those headaches have just about disappeared. I sleep sound all night long and get up in the morning full of energy. I can't begin to tell how thankful I am for Tanlac. It's certainly been a blessing to me. I'm enjoying life for the first time in ten years as a result of taking it and I'm glad to have the opportunity of telling people what I think of it."

Tanlac is sold in Fort Wayne by Meyer Bros & Co., in Woodburn by Fueling Drug Co., and in Harlan by A. Reeder.

Superintendent Anspach has been a constant booster for the picnic and used all his efforts to make it successful. Ed Bayley took charge of the sports and did much to make the day interesting. William Worlie, from the General Electric on Broadway, took an active part in score-keeping, arranging the contestants and keeping the program in order.

The picnic is the second or third to be held, but little has been accomplished for the last two years on account of the war. The affair will be made an annual one and the enthusiasm displayed Saturday promises to make the annual meetings one to be looked forward to.

BLACK SATIN GOWN FOR EVENING WEAR

There are going to be many more evening gowns in evidence this year than there have been for a few years past and there are going to be more formal functions where they may be worn. Here is a gown which is stunning in its simplicity. The skirt is black satin exquisitely hung in pleats with a panel of jet in the front and a jet ornament holding in the pleats at the hem. The sleeveless bodice is made of two bands of the jet over silver cloth. This makes a stunning dinner gown or dance frock.

ent. It is thought that Fort Wayne will be the location of the assembly as this place is centrally located and is of easy access to the various division ends of the roads of the district.

H. V. Anders, chairman of the organization of the western division of the Pennsylvania, presided at the meeting.

The coal situation and the car situation are doubtless joint signs of a hard winter.

The strike of the actors is seriously curtailing production, but of nothing that adds to the cost of living. If there must be strikes, that is an admirable sort.

Stripping the warehouses of stored food may bring down the cost of living for the present, but will there be plenty more to put back against the needs of late winter and early spring?

It is announced that Mr. Plumb, the inventor of the plan, is to speak in Port Wayne before long. When Mr. Plumb comes we hope he will tell us what procedure his plan provides in such a contingency as for instance a failure of railway business to keep up wages to a standard chosen for the beginning. Are wages to come down with revenues or is connection to be made with the federal treasury when earnings fail, as they do now and then?

Mayor Ole Hansen, the capable and courageous mayor of Seattle, has resigned, will take a rest and then, according to gossip, will survey the road from his town to the presidency. Senator Miles Poindexter is also under grooming for similar possibilities. Considering her geographical position, her population, her political uncertainties and her youthfulness as a commonwealth, the state of Washington is doing right well to offer two candidates for the presidency at one time.

The most the booze interests now hope for seems to be that President Wilson will proclaim demobilization complete in time to afford a month or two of grace for legal distribution of a hundred or so million gallons of left-over liquor in states that had not outlawed the traffic before war prohibition began. It will be a hilarious month or two if the federal ban should be lifted and the traffic resumed before the national amendment goes into effect next January. Those who forgot to get fixed before will not be negligent again.

Japan feinted with racial equality at Versailles and, while Mr. Wilson was dodging that got away with Shantung. That was a rich piece of loot, but it was only the beginning of what Nippon will get out of China before she is through, and when the subjugation of China is complete—as it will be if Japan have unmolested course—the action of the American peace delegation at Versailles can fairly be blamed for it.
A protest lodged and fought for would have kept America in position for the future. But it is not yet too late for the senate to save the honor and prestige of this land.

Ten thousand miles of riding and thirty days of campaigning will not bring down the cost of living and it will hardly influence the people of the invaded states to sob with longing for the blessings of the covenant, but if the experience doesn't teach Mr. Wilson something to his advantage it will be his second appeal within a year that has brought a lesson he could not learn.
Just before the congressional elections last fall he staked his hope on the delusion that to get what he wanted needed only that he should demand it. The answer was not what he expected, but it was conclusive enough to have taught him something, though evidently it did not.

The wage demands of the railway brother-hoods, now held in abeyance but certain to be put forward at an early date, will add directly to the payrolls of the railroads about eight hundred million dollars. This sum would be increased to about a billion and a quarter by the customary overtime charges. The railroads are now running behind hundreds of millions, though freight and passenger rates have been advanced greatly to meet the wage increases.
Whence is to come the additional revenue to meet the new demands? Rates must go up further, for railroads have no revenues save in what they are paid for the service they render—though of course under federal control the public exchequer can be drained, as for almost two years it has been, to make up the deficit. The cost of living for one hundred and eight millions of people not sharing in the benefits of railroad wage increases but footing the bill for them will not come down under this process. Only efficient management can pay good wages out of earnings and efficient management and federal control are opposite conditions.

WOULD BENEFIT BOTH WAYS.

If there can be assured prospect that government use of the Irene Byron tuberculosis hospital here will continue for at least a reasonable term of years there would seem to be no reason why the county should not provide the means to enlarge the accommodations of the institution so that the arrangement can be made. It is beyond question the fact that sooner or later the hospital will have to be expanded to meet our own need of it. If the government proposes to become its patron for a considerable period, what is paid for that occupation of it will at length discharge the expenditure necessary for enlargements and leave the county with the expanded hospital in hand at no cost to the taxpayers. Out of this would come the two-fold benefit of an institution offering all needed capacity to take care of our own patients and of affording a refuge for service men, whose claim to attention cannot be ignored. The plans for the sanitarium contemplate the additions sooner or later that acceptance of the government's proposal would require at once. The benefit to the county would be immediate, for the military patients would immediately have the effect to lower the overhead expense that just now is high and the reimbursement of the county for its additional investment would begin at once. The probability is that the arrangement would endure so long as to effect a return of a large part of the original expenditure. It is a proposal that merits earnest consideration. The county council will have the matter before it tomorrow and it is to be hoped the proposal may be found such as to invite favorable action. It will insure an enlargement of the hospital that we shall need after a while and render a service that the county will be glad to bestow in behalf of men who have given up health and were freely offering to give up life itself to the nation's cause.

EARLY FROST IN WASHINGTON.

The flower of Irish democracy in the United States foregathered in Washington Saturday along with other American Irish to have a say about the league of nations and the treaty in general. Among them of the president's party were Governor Dunne, Bourke Cockran, Frank Walsh, Judge Cohan and others of whose brand and breed and standing there will be none to gainsay. It was altogether quite a party and the foreign relations committee of the senate sat pretty well through the day to listen to what these men had to say. Plenty it was and well said, too. Reject the treaty, was the gist of it and there was much to that end—good reasons altogether, and having not altogether to do with the question of Independence for Ireland, but a deal to say for continued independence for the United States of America. Of course the American Irish were in Washington to plead primarily for Ireland and to present the blessing of his hope of freedom under the regime of the blessed covenant, but they by no means harped that one string. They talked sound Americanism and they presented the league of nations for what it is and must be to America. It was an impressive meeting, for the men who spoke for Ireland represented and voiced the feeling of a good many millions of Irish strain in the United States.
There was no great respect paid the spokesmen by the democratic members of the committee, who mainly remained away from the hearing, but that did not put any check upon the flow of testimony that the league of nations will be a fraudulent as offering self-determination to some of the peoples of the world and will be a hamper and peril to this country. Mr. Wilson's trip over the land might have been largely anticipated and obviated by inviting the Irish representatives to the white house to address him in the east room and listen to what he expects to say to the people of thirty or forty states during the next four weeks. He would have got the ear direct, almost, of some millions for whom the Irish visitors could speak confidently and back to whom they could have carried the assurance and comfort of the Great Apostle of the League.
A pity it is the thing wasn't thought of and carried out—though perhaps it was and not carried out. The democracy of the heaviest artillery of the delegation does not appear to have made strong appeal to nor commanded lively respect of its fellowship and brotherhood in the committee and doubtless the same is true of the president of the United States. At all events, there was neither welcome nor hearing for them among the cohorts of the league. Perhaps the morning organ, being duly commissioned and sealed to speak
ex-cathedra for the Irish, and having an inspired, unhesitating, undeviating voice for the league can explain how this is. That for a day or so at least it will "lay off" Lodge and Knox and New and Watson and Borah and suitably castigate Judge Cohan, Governor Dunne, Bourke Cockran, Frank Walsh and the other democratic-Irish malcontents pretending a devotion of Irish freedom we confidently expect. O, yes—we do, indeed!

THE DAY AND THE TIMES.

Never in the history of this holiday has it come in a time so distracted and torn with industrial trouble. Labor day this year finds strikes in every part of the country, with greater upheavels brewing and vastly worse conditions threatened. It is an evil ferment. The world has just emerged from the greatest and most destructive war of all time and of everything the world today stands in need there is not enough.
The costs of living here and everywhere are as a consequence at unprecedented levels. Every interference with production, every trammel upon distribution, every obstruction to commerce can have no effect but to give fresh impulse to the ascent of prices.

In this country a widespread strike in the steel and iron industry threatens to inflict practically all industry save agriculture with a paralysis from which everybody will suffer.
Farther in the foreground looms the dire possibilities of a general railway strike that once launched can spell but calamity for every interest and every person. No living head in the land can wholly escape some touch of that blight. A fortnight's tie-up of transportation will see the country stricken to idleness, hunger stalking through the land and disorder fomenting on every side. This is no picture conjured by idle fancy.
The railroads must keep things moving or there can be neither work nor wages, neither food nor fuel, and starving, freezing millions will create a ferment out of which anarchy will not be slow to rise hideously. There can be no temporizing with the question of transportation or no transportation.

Everybody suffers from abnormal conditions.
Labor—meaning, that is, the unions—is suffering no more than other classes and varieties of humans who earn what they must have to live and much less than most of them. Striking to advance wages or to impose conditions simply serves to make evil conditions more acute. The need is to find the way to make the cost of living more tolerable and the means by which alone that can be done is to increase production of everything whereof there is a shortage in the world. Drives against profiteers and profiteering may here and there effect some relief, but it will be neither general nor great in degree.
There can be no thorough relief in which everybody may share until something like normal conditions are restored and nothing will contribute so much to that consummation as that everybody shall remain at work, do his best and permit on every hand that the best be done.

It is a time for all labor everywhere—organized and unorganized, manual toilers and brain workers, every sort upon whose effort depends in some measure the moving of the essential affairs of the world—to keep a clear head, a stout heart and a spirit of readiness to work together and steadfastly until it has at length worked out the problem of the times. Bolshevism, socialism or any ism, cult or lunacy will not overcome the world's shortage of necessities.
Only work can do that and the more there are who will stick to the job of producing the sooner will shortage be overcome and conditions reduced to normal. Wild-eyed radicalism will not add a peck of grain nor a pound of beef to the world's short store. The steadfast industry of all everywhere who are able to produce something needed can pull this old world out of the hole and by no force other can it be done.

Government Aid in Getting a Start

(By Frederick J. Haskin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—A woman whom big business concerns are willing to pay $50 a day as an expert in solving labor problems, to whom labor unions are willing to listen, and who is a confidante of newspapers and telephone operators, should be of some use in straightening out that tangle of confused self-interest and mutual misunderstanding known as the labor problem.

Such a person evidently has in some degree the respect and confidence of all parties to the controversy of the employers, the unions and individual workers who are without organized protection. Mrs. Anna Y. Reed, head of the Junior Section of the United States Employment Service who is now engaged in organizing in various American cities branches of the employment service which are to work in connection with the public school systems. Their primary and immediate purpose is to find satisfactory jobs for young men and women just out of school. Their secondary and more constructive purpose is to help the schools find out how to make education more of a real preparation for work than it generally is at present.

This is to be a service to employers as much as to workers. In Mrs. Reed's own words, she intends to "tie up the source of labor with the agencies that place and use it," and "to see how education functions outside of the schoolroom."

Mrs. Reed has personally aided in the organization of each of these bureaus. She is still spending her days working in the Washington local bureau. At 4:30, when the bureau closes, she calls in a new crop of stenographers and begins her work as head of the national organization. All of this she does for a salary which is a fraction of standing offers she has received from business concerns. She has earned good money in the past, but her needs are few, and that she is willing to make the financial sacrifice for the sake of being at the head of a national organization is a matter of which she is proud.

Mrs. Reed's work is being watched with special interest here, because it looks as though she might help to break the prejudice which has arisen against it. It is a generally acknowledged fact that the employment service did most useful work during the war, but that a part of the prejudice against it has arisen from the fact that the employment service has been in the hands of the employers. They have charged in substance that it is a tool of the unions and that parlor bolshevism have found access to its staff.

Whether these charges are true or not, they have tended to weaken the confidence of employers in the employment service, and it is vital to the success of such an organization that it should have the confidence of both capital and labor.

As a result of the opposition it stirred up, the employment service almost went out of existence. It was saved from oblivion by an appropriation of $100,000, which was made by the federal government. This money is being used in organizing the junior section, and it seems probable that this particular effort will meet with the approval of employers as well as of labor.

HEALTH TALKS BY WILLIAM BRADY M.D.

Hereditary Syphilis—(2)

It is no longer believed as in the past, that woman free from syphilis can bear a syphilitic child by a syphilitic husband. The blood test of such a mother, though she be apparently a healthy woman, nevertheless shows that she harbors the germ of syphilis in her system.

If either mother or father has syphilis acquired within four or five years there is a tendency toward death of the unborn offspring prematurely; or a smaller chance of the birth of a living child prematurely, the child surviving only a short time, or a still smaller chance of the birth of a child fully developed but showing signs of syphilis, or a very small chance that a normal, healthy child may be born and survive.

The child with inherited syphilis is unlikely to survive to adult age, though if the disease is frankly recognized and persistently treated by a physician, the child may survive throughout childhood, there is at least an even chance that it may be arrested before serious degenerative changes have occurred.

There are various stigmata or signs by which a physician may pretty accurately recognize in child or adult changes wrought by hereditary syphilis. These signs are: (1) a rash on the scalp or hair is too dry, and if the formula three to five drops of castor oil.

My advice (Mrs. S. W.) ANSWER—Well, I hope so. You do the child a great injustice by feeding her toddy. You are unfair to her when you assume the responsibility.

When a Girl Marries

By ANN LISLE

CHAPTER CCLXXXVII.
"Look who's here!" cried a jovial voice, and Tom Mason came to a full stop at the table where our party of four had just finished dining. "I'm waiting for you," he said, "and I've decided to arrive. Now if you were to ask me to draw up a chair and consume a heaping of foaming ginger ale, it would give me a pleasant opportunity to tell Miss Phoebe how well she's looking."

"Jim flashed a quick, keen glance from Phoebe to Neal and back again before he replied to Evelyn Mason's cousin. In the tiny interval before Jim spoke, Tom leaned down and murmured in his usual pseudo-devoted manner:

"And to tell Donna Anna that she's lovelier than ever."
Then Jim's voice overrode Tom's whisper with a cordial:
"Draw up and sit down, Tommie, my lad."

Tom assented readily and made a great point of offering his good wishes to Phoebe and Neal with cordiality and a certain easy ignoring of the past. All this display of generosity of good breeding and made me realize again that family does count. These Masons and Harrisons weren't a bit better than simple folk like Carl and Daisy and their but tradition and training have given them as a heritage what we have to dig out for ourselves. And I, for one, don't always know where to dig.

We were of excellent terms by the time Pat arrived—and then things took a turn for the even more chummy and cheerful. The three men like each other and my younger brother unreservedly and sincerely—that made for cordiality. They knew each other well—that made for an easy flow of good natured banter. But when the silver-haired Pat, of the dardelive eyes and bitter mouth, turned suddenly tender and sweet and grave whenever he spoke to Phoebe. She adored his manner. And it made me proud and proud. So we all in a mood to "just love" each other and to feel ready to tell whomever it might concern that all was right with the world.

Two or gayety there came a sudden noticeable hush—the air grew still and heavy, and a great zigzag of lightning followed a clap of thunder, and was followed in turn by a sudden pealing of rain.

Pat flung back his gray head and ran his hand across his forehead in the well-remembered gesture.

"Scurry for shelter, girls! We'll join you in a moment."

"Who says we're a good company for each other?" Pat asked. "Here we are on the empty hurricane deck, whence all but we have fled. What do folks say to chartering a sea-going bird and finishing our love life at my diggings?"

"I say great!" said Jim, emphatically. "If my little girl isn't tired or too painfully aware of a certain ankle!"

I hesitated a moment. It seemed to me a particularly tactless thing for us of the clan of Harrison to go to Pat Dalton's home. Surely, this would offend Virginia beyond endurance. But while I hesitated, the adage fulfilled itself and I was lost for Phoebe cried eagerly:

"Oh, I couldn't bear to have this nice party break up yet. And I'd love to come to your home, Pat! We won't let Anne walk a step, and I can see by her pinky-pink cheeks that she hasn't a hurt in the world. Have you, dear?"

"Not an ache. Not a desire that doesn't coincide with the plans of our 'bunch.' I said determined not to be a spoil-sport or a prophet of evil."

That settled things. We found a taxi big enough to hold our party, and swept gayly down the slippery, black network of rain-drenched streets.

Pat's apartment, at which we arrived in the course of ten or fifteen minutes, proved to be an odd little place of many small rooms. I would have chosen wide space, long vistas and Gothic arches for Pat, so that the little rooms with their gay chintzes puzzled me. It was a very attractive little place, but not at all like Pat. Phoebe stumbled on the curb.

"Oh, Neal, I ought to have a place just like this," she cried. "So if you have to work nights or take trips I won't be gloomy and frightened. A little place like this won't let you be lonely or cold."

Pat smiled wistfully. And I felt that in common decency I ought to look the other way. I was delighted when Jim's voice rang out briskly:

"What have we here?"

He was standing at an odd sort of desk—an old-fashioned secretaire, all cubby holes and shelves. He picked up some object and held it behind him. Like a flash Pat was at his side. His eyes darted to a particular spot and then the look of concern that had narrowed them faded and a look of great relief came over his face.

"What did you discover Jim? If it's any little thing you've taken a fancy to just 'hellup' yourself." He held up a little ivory cylinder of quaint wood carvings, then tapped it so the dice fell out. "I won't refuse the bottle—but in the meantime, who's for a game?"

"I'll play you," replied Pat in colorless contrast to his manner when he had gone to see what it was Jim had discovered.

As he crossed to the table where Jim was now sitting, he swept something from the desk and into his pocket. No one else noticed. Phoebe and Neal were absorbed in an inspection of the apartment. Jim was sitting.

NEW TELEPHONE DIRECTORY
Will Be Issued Sept. 20; Delay in Printing.
The new directory of the Home Telephone company will be issued about September 20. The issue had been announced for September 1, but the work has been delayed by the non-arrival of the paper needed in the printing of the fall edition of the work. The congested condition of the paper mills and the slow freight movements are assigned as the cause of the postponement of the issuance of the work.
The new book will contain about 15,000 names or 1,500 more than the spring issue. A total of eighteen thousand of the directories will be printed.

TRAVELETTE
Potomac Park
(By Niskah)

When Jefferson was president, he used to go right out behind the white house and take a swim almost every evening. The Potomac was then where Potomac park is now. Great flocks of wild fowl rested on the river within sight of the executive mansion, and still greater flocks of mosquitoes made the occupants of the white house wish that Washington had chosen a hill top for his house instead of a swamp. The croaking of frogs in those days used to disturb the cabinet meetings and it was not uncommon to kill a water moccasin on the white house grounds.
Now the river has been pushed back at least half a mile from the white house, and what was once a swamp has been filled in, paved, and equipped as a play ground. Where Jefferson swam, hundreds of Washingtonians now play golf and tennis, and the Lincoln memorial, one of the capital's few architectural successes, stands where there was once deep water.
Potomac park is still being extended, and the river steadily narrowed.

State Tennis Tournament Closes With a Banquet

JOHN HENNESSEY PROCLAIMED THE NEW STATE NET CHAMP.

Trophies Are Awarded at Clubhouse Saturday Evening—Fritz Is Unable to Cop With Side Line Drives of Opponent.

In four matches of spectacular tennis, John Hennessey, of Indianapolis, defeated his fellow townsman, Fritz Bastian, in the finals of the open state championship tennis tournament on the courts of the Fort Wayne Country Club, Saturday afternoon, winning the first leg on the William Alexander Fleet Memorial Trophy by scores of 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

The deciding match was featured by Hennessey's wonderful net play, and Bastian's seemingly impossible gets. It was Hennessey's sensational supply of side line drives to the corners of the back courts which ultimately won him the match, but many of his lightning strokes were returned from apparently impossible corners by his clever opponent.

The first set was won by Hennessey winning Bastian's serve in deuce. Bastian recovered for the next four in whirlwind fashion, Hennessey playing a safe game, and lacking the daring that had characterized his earlier matches. With the count four-one in Bastian's favor, Hennessey took the next game, lost the seventh and took the eighth. Bastian spurred again and ended the set by allowing his opponent only one point.

The second set opened by Hennessey winning his service, and following with two more victories. Bastian retaliated by taking the next two games, but Hennessey followed by taking the final needed game and the set.

Bastian opened strong in the third set, attaining a forty-love lead, only to have Johnny come up from behind and win the initial game of the set. But Bastian won on Hennessey's serve in the second game, tying the count. Hennessey assumed the lead in the third game winning on Bastian's serve, and sealed his leadership in the set by taking the next three games. With the game score 4-1 against him Bastian came back like a winner and took the next two games.

Hennessey here stepped on the accelerator and with a world of speed chased his opponent from one corner to the other, winning the next two games and the third set.

A five set match seemed probable when Bastian opened the fourth set by winning the first two games. It required but two more games for Johnny to tie the score. Fritz assumed the lead for the first time when he won the fifth game, for immediately thereafter Hennessey opened up with all he had. His assortment of shots was dizzying, and he lost but two points in the second four games, winning the set and match on a love game.

The point scores of the match follow:—First set—Hennessey 6 4 6 4 2 10 1 4-47; Hennessey 1 4 2 1 4 8 1 3-36.

—Second set—Bastian 2 1 1 4 4 2 6 2-29; Hennessey 4 4 4 2 2 4 6 4-40.

—Third set—Bastian 4 1 1 2 2 4 6 2-4-39; Hennessey 6 4 4 4 4 1 4 6-46.

—Fourth set—Bastian 6 4 1 5 4 1 0 1 0-22; Hennessey 4 1 4 2 4 4 4 4-4-33. Hennessey's points totaled 154 to Bastian's 135. There were only two deuces in the entire match, these both coming in the last three games. Hennessey gained the only ace in service. Hennessey served four doubles to Bastian's one. Hennessey deserves all the credit in world for his victory. He eliminated two of the most feared players in the tournament on the two days prior to the final match when he disposed of Simmons and Bartel.

The Other Winners. Honors were retained for the Hoosier state against the onslaught of the Cleveland Aspirants when Fritz Bastian and Simmons won out in a grueling five set

LINCOLN LIFERS REPEAT THE SAME OLD STORY

Mart Cleary's Team Defeated the Colored Giants for Third Time.

THE FINAL SCORE 12 TO 6

For the third time Jones' and Wilson's Colored Giants have had the idea they could down the Lincoln Lifers and for the third time they have had the idea entirely wiped out. The last time by the drubbing they received at League park yesterday afternoon in a very erratic game abounding with errors and flukes. The score was 12 to 6.

The dusky challengers played a strange game and made many shifts in the line-up in an effort to beat back the city champs. At the end only four of their men were in the positions in which they started. Even Shortstop Selden was shifted from his regular position to the pitcher's box when "Steel Arm" Johnson found the weather too rough on the mound. However, it was of no use despite the fact that the majority of the breaks were in their favor. The last two hits charged against Dietrich are accounted for by the roughness of the infield, numerous hits taking an unlucky bounce just before reaching the fielder and bounding off to the outfield.

The score follows: Colored Giants—AB R H O A E; Barker, 3b-2b 5 2 3 5 2 1; Wilson, 2b-1f 4 1 1 0 0 0; Selden, ss-p 5 0 2 2 1 3; Paul, cf 4 0 0 3 0 1; Martin, 1b 5 1 2 7 0 0; Suggs, cf-2b 4 1 1 2 0 0; Bady, c 2 0 1 1 1 0; Johnson, p-ss 4 0 0 2 5 1.

The SPORTLIGHT by Grantland Rice

The Trainers. My name is Trouble—I'm a busy bloke—I am the test of Courage—and of Class—I bind the coward to a bitter yoke. I drive the craven from the crowning pass; Weaklings I crush before they come to fame. But as the red star guides across the night I train the stalwart for a better game. I drive the valiant to a harder fight.

My name is Hard Luck—wrecker of rare dreams—I follow all who seek the open gray; I am the shadow where the far light gleams. For those who seek to know the easy way; Quitters I break before they reach the crest. But where the red field echoes with the drums, I build the fighter for the final test. I would the brave for any drive that comes.

My name is Sorrow—I shall come to all—to you—and you—along the Trail of Joy; By street and stream I pay my certain call. Before the sweetness of success can cloy; And weaker souls shall weep amid the throng. And fall before me broken or dismayed. But braver hearts shall know that I belong. And take me in serene and unafraid.

My name's Defeat—but through the bitter fight To those who know I'm something more than friend; For I can build beyond the wrath of night. And drive away all yellow from the blend; For those who quit, I am the final blow. But for the brave who seek their chance to learn I show the way at last beyond the foe. To where the scarlet flames of triumph burn.

Maxims for the Highway. If it wasn't for Hard Luck, man's fibre would soon run to mush and his soul turn into jelly.

You can best a philosopher in sport—but you can't make it both him where he has done his best.

SCHEDULED 20 ROUNDS

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Fight talk was the main topic of London sporting conversation today on the eve of one of the greatest boxing shows ever staged in England.

Interest became acute with the termination of training in the camps of Joe Beckett, the British heavyweight champion and Eddie McGorty, the American soldier scrapper, who are to meet tomorrow night in a 20 round bout which will feature a card including two British champions, a French champion, two Americans and a crack British heavyweight.

Both Beckett and the American were reported in perfect condition to mill the 20 rounds for a purse of $10,000 and side bet of $10,000.

Beckett will weigh about 184, while McGorty will enter the ring about 165. The champion will enter the ring a favorite over the American. The winner will probably meet the French champion, Georges Carpentier, in December to decide the European title.

LABOR DAY GOLF EVENTS. At the Fort Wayne Country Club Today.

Though there has been a great deal of enthusiasm over the Indiana State Tennis tournament matches it has failed to detract from the interest shown in golf. Several interesting tournaments are under way at present and are being followed by the members because of the unexpected ability shown by some of the younger players. Several surprises have been pulled and some of the veterans of the course have been eliminated.

In speaking of younger players, such as Dr. Wheelock, Cap Merritt and Arthur Hall cannot be called mere youngsters. This week's hero seems to be Cap Merritt as he is now carrying many new scraps at his side and explaining the many battles he went through in winning them.

The semi-finals for the Keklonga trophy will be played on Wednesday and the finals in both the Keklonga trophy and the new players' tournament will be played next Saturday.

Wednesday Results, Keklonga Trophy. Merritt defeated Stillman, 1 up. McCulloch defeated O'Connor, 1 up. Stillman defeated Rockhill, 5 up. Hobe defeated Ralston, 2 up. Wheelock defeated Miller, 6 up. Merritt defeated Rinehart, 3 up. Ritter defeated Toy, 4 up. Hall defeated Simon, 1 up. Saturday Results, Keklonga Trophy. Merritt defeated McCulloch, 4 up. Merritt defeated Stillman, 1 up. Alkire defeated Wheelock, 3 up. Hall defeated Ritter, 7 up.

New Players' Tournament. Kroeff defeated Lines, 5 up. Fisher defeated Brosnan, 3 up. C. W. Lang Trophy. The qualifying round for the C. W. Lang trophy will be played on Friday afternoon, the sixteen lowest scores to qualify for the tournament. This is the ladies' championship event and will be played without handicap. Because of the fine scores a number of ladies have been making this promises to be one of the best events of the season.

The winner will receive a handsome cup donated by C. W. Lang and the runner-up will receive a fine souvenir both of which are now on exhibition at the club house.

Two events will be played on Labor day—a two-club tournament in the morning, each player to use but two clubs and the afternoon event will be a two-ball foursome, 18 holes. This will be a handicap affair and the team making the lowest net score will receive a new club for each member of the team.

Sport World With James J. Corbett

By James J. Corbett. (Copyright, 1909, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Jack Dempsey's first battle in defense of his title may be fought in Tia Juana, Mexico, just across the line from San Diego, Calif.

Jimmy Corbett's elaborate plans to make the little Mexican town a sportsman's mecca this winter include a fistie program of the starkest kind. He proposes between November and March to put on at least four championship fights and hopes to list Dempsey among the performers.

Coffroth owns the race track in Tia Juana which is to reopen in November after a long shutdown. The folks of Southern California, with an inborn love for thoroughbred clashes, are wildly anxious for that time to come and there is a certainty that the winter meet will be a successful one. If Coffroth can attract enough class horses and star jockeys to give it a "class" appearance.

The purpose of Coffroth's visit east was to secure promises of horse owners and pilots to perform at Tia Juana. The doughy Californian promoter has secured enough pledges to assure—if the pledges are kept—that the race meet over the California border will be first class in every respect.

The fights are to be added attractions for the racing crowd. One of Coffroth's aims is to put on, soon after the opening of the racing season, a bout between Benny Leonard and the most formidable of the lightweight contenders. There are no boxing laws in Mexico and the fights can go as far as distance that the ringmen agree. Twenty rounds, however, is probably the distance that will be decided upon.

After the lightweight scrap is over, Coffroth will attempt to put on a bout with Johnny Kilbane, defending the featherweight laurels; another with Jack Britton battling in defense of the welterweight crown and a third between the middleweight champion and the best of the class of aspirants.

But the big thing—the real thriller that Coffroth hopes to spring—is Jack Dempsey, fighting 20 rounds or so to a decision against whoever makes public opinion elects to meet him. If Coffroth harkens to the opinion around California parts then the Dempsey foeman will be none other than Willie Meehan the topoly heavyweights of San Francisco.

Ever since Dempsey whipped Jess Willard this Meehan has been yelling for a fight. He reiterates that he has "something" on Dempsey; that Jack may be able to whip all the fighters in the world with one hand tied behind his back but he can't whip me with both. And, though the bulk of westerners acclaim Dempsey the greatest warrior of them all, there are some who think that Meehan could give Jack a real tussle.

It was Meehan who won a four round decision over Dempsey a short while ago—the only time that Jack encountered defeat of any scrap of weight.

In 1917 the spectacular "comeback" under the management of Jack Kearns that ultimately landed him on the top of the pugilistic ladder.

Coffroth figures that he can offer attractive purses for each of the fights. The attendance would be recruited largely from the racing throng, ever liberal in its expenditures. Coffroth could get heavy prices for seats and could break ahead in each fight even though he paid husky guarantees to all the warriors who are obliged to participate in his "all-star" show. Undoubtedly, Los Angeles and San Francisco would send big fight delegations to Tia Juana, helping to boost the "gate."

And so, all things considered, it does look as if Coffroth's plans to make Tia Juana not merely a racing place but a real sporting center this winter will materialize.

asked several other questions, but at last appeared satisfied, and so that we discussed the guard of the day, both agreeing it would be best to leave for the river as soon as possible. The river unseen. Sam pressed himself as unwearied by the night's work, and was willing to stand the first watch, I was not so sure. He had fallen asleep almost immediately, and I did not know what aroused me. I immediately sat upright, started, and instantly awake, the first object I saw was a man standing at the opposite ridge, eagerly looking me to join him. The moment he was assured of my coming, he without so much as uttering a word, disappeared into the shadow of the woods. I crossed the ravine with reckless step, clambering up the opposite side, and as I went, I suddenly came into view of the broad expanse of water. Scarcely had I glimpsed the rolling flood, sparkling under the moon's rays, when my gaze turned upward, and I saw a number of movements of the negro. Less than a mile away, its rapidly revolving wheel turning the water into foam in a ceaseless battle against the current. The beams of the moonlight were perceptible on the upper deck. I stared at the apparition, scarcely comprehending the reality. "What's that?" I asked. "He's bettah stopp down more, sah," I urged. "Fer som o dem fellars see 'em see yer yet. Ah nebbber hear 'em 'n' he saw no smoke till she was 'bout a mile off. He can't see fer de fust, fer Ah cu'd dare go fer her, but Ah cu'd dar dey'd see me, so Ah jus' 'rally lay down yere an' watched 'em go by."

"Is it government boat?"

"Ah reckon maybe; leas'twaze thar's a heap o' sojers aboard her—reg'lars, 'n' reckons, fer dey's all in uniform. Ah reckon 'em 'n' de 'n' 'n' sojers."

"You know the steamer?"

"Yas, sah, Ah's seen her face afore down at St. Louee. She uster run de ribber—she's de John B. 'n' she uster 'n' no great shakes o' boat, sah."

"Is it eyes, which had been eagerly following the movements of the craft, turned and glanced at me. "Massa, what he was aboard dat steamer?"

"Kirby! Are you sure about that, Ah?"

"Course Ah's sure. Didn't Ah see 'em jus' as plain as Ah see you right 'n' yere?" He was torred by de rail, near de pilot house, a watch'n' dis whole lot fer like a hawk, but dar wasn't no one else 'n' de boat.

"But what could he be doing there at a troop boat?"

started at my voice.

"Yas, sah; putty near ery sort o' boat kin. Tribble is, sah, we's got started in de wrong place—dar's no place to watch 't'her side o' de river yere."

"Who told you the best way to find 'em?"

"Shrunk?"

"His eyes widened and searched me, and I saw that he was somewhat suspicious of any white man.

"A nigger down St. Louee way, sah. Dey done cotched him an' brought him back afore he even got to Beards Bay."

"And you believe you can guide us there?"

"Ah sure can, if whut dat nigger told me. I'm s'ry, sah, Ah done questioned him mighty partic'lar, an' Ah members ebery sign whut he s'v'ed me." He grinned broadly. "Ah s'pose you suspected Ah might need dat in de night."

"Ah right; then; it is certainly light enough now—let's push off."

"We had taken the sand lightly and were able to pole the boat into deep water without any trouble. The broad river behind us remained level in mist, but the gray light was sufficient for our purpose, enabling us to see the movements of the craft as it rounded the protruding headland, out of sight from below.

"Tain't no awful fur from yere, sah," Sam called to me.

"What—the place where we are?"

"Yas, sah. It's de mouth o' s' little creek, yut yer nebbber see till yere right plum at it. Bettah keep yere eyes open."

The girl, alertly bent forward, was first among us to detect the concealed opening, which was almost completely hidden by the branches reaching over the river. Her voice ringing excitedly, she pointed it out. Sam was quick to respond, and almost before I had defined it, he had established the spot, the bow of the boat was in the opening, and through the leafy screen, the low hung branches sweeping against our faces and scraping along the sides. I looked a veritable cave, and indeed it was. The darkness was so deep, my hasty glance through the shadow was the outline of a small log moored to a fallen tree. I scrambled over, found precarious footing, and used my hands.

"So this is the place?" I questioned incredulously, staring about at the dark, silent forest, which still remained in the night shadow.

"Why, there's nothing her."

"No, sah; dar certainly don't 'pears fer ter be much," and the negro crept out of the cockpit and joined me.

"'Cept 'n' de boat, 'n' de log, 'n' de 'round yere, lea' folks he's bin a-ridin' in it. Ah reckon."

BABES DEAD WHEN TAKEN FROM BURNING HOUSE

(Special to the News.)
PAULING, O., Sept. 1.—The two small daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. Archdeon, Lois 6, and Elinore 4, were burned to death when the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Clark, was destroyed by fire. The two children were sleeping upstairs and their mother was sleeping on the first floor. The mother was awakened by the smoke and fire and made an attempt to reach the children but found the staircase ablaze and was forced to jump through a window to save herself. She quickly raised the alarm and neighbors were soon on the scene. A ladder was quickly raised to the bedroom window and Miss Keeler, who was working nearby, climbed up. After three attempts he reached the bed on which the children were lying and lowered them to the ground. Both of the children were dead and the older was burned almost beyond recognition. The father of the children is a telegraph operator located at Vermontville, Mich. The mother and the children had been here four days visiting their parents.

A Day at St. Elizabeth's

(By Frederick J. Haskin)

ST. ELIZABETH'S HOSPITAL, D. C. Sept. 1.—This is the home of nearly four thousand men and women who were unable to adjust themselves to that complicated machine called civilization.

Each of us goes through a struggle more or less bitter and hard in learning to adjust his mind and body and instincts to this hard shell of law and custom. Many of us at some time or other have felt that the struggle might be a losing one. Here are the ones who lost, and have been sent by society to spend part or all of their lives in a little world of green trees and grass and cool quiet buildings—a peaceful world which is adjusted to their needs, as they have failed to adjust themselves to the needs of the world outside.

That is what a modified insanity asylum is—a refuge for the ones that didn't fit. At St. Elizabeth's hospital the great government insane asylum, is generally conceded to be the best of its kind in the United States.

During the war the government asylum had a hard time. It was overcrowded with men driven crazy by the shock and strain of war. At the same time not enough attendants and physicians could be hired at the salaries which congress allowed to be paid. It is hard enough to handle a great crowd of demented men and women when all facilities are adequate. When both space and competent help are short, the situation is inevitably a distressing one.

St. Elizabeth's is now emerging triumphantly from its war-time troubles. The pay of its attendants has been raised, its staff of physicians increased, and, at the same time, the number of patients has declined. St. Elizabeth's hospital is a park of several hundred acres with a score of red brick buildings scattered about among the trees. A large percentage of the patients are to be seen working, walking or playing games about these grounds. Every type of human life is represented here.

Even the disturbed war is remarkably free of real disturbance. It has also one of the great semi-circular assembly rooms at the end of a long corridor with dormitories on either side. Outside the assembly room is a wide veranda, like any other veranda, except that it has a screen of heavy wire, like a zoo cage. Once in a while a big crowd of excited and nervous men climb around on this wire like a monkey, and it must be strong enough to hold him.

A few of the inmates of this place have a look of hopeless dementia, but most of them are merely childish and frolicsome. They sing, whistle, call each other names, munch apples and cookies, and behave generally like a lot of bad boys in school when the teacher's back is turned.

There is an old sailor in uniform who years ago was a knowing and self-satisfied grin. He has a great secret. He thinks he is an important man, dangerous to those in power, and they have put him here to keep him out of the way. But it's not such a bad place to be, and he has the goods on them, and sometime he is going to spring something. He tells you about it with a happy chuckle.

A big blond boy approaches him and begins calling him names and challenging him to fight. "I'll beat h—ll out of you," he threatens. "Ah, gwan," says the sailor sweetly, "you couldn't beat a drum."

Finally they square off for a fight, but decide to dance a jig instead, and after jiggling for a while, sailor fashion, they sit down to rest, wearing expressions of beatific and childish contentment.

There is one old man in this ward who lies on his back all day, reading the financial columns in a newspaper, making them up with a pencil. He, too, looks happy. Life is a living plan of campaign that will bring him a fortune.

These "disturbed patients" are the worst in the institution. Insanity, even of the violent type, is often cured, and insanity is not always hereditary. These are two facts, pointed out by Dr. J. C. Hassall, of this institution, which are of great significance to many men and women, who stand in constant fear of insanity.

The work of leading foreign and American psychiatrists has recently shown that mental defect is nearly always hereditary. Judge Olson's crime laboratory in Chicago a good example. He has proved that criminals are mental defectives, that they often have some specific mental disease in addition, and that they breed other defectives who in turn become criminals because they cannot make a living any other way.

This important work has strengthened a popular idea that insanity of all sorts is hereditary, and that it is generally incurable. Nearly everyone knows some man or woman who lives in constant and often morbid fear of madness, because of some taint of insanity in his or her heredity.

As a matter of fact, most of us could probably discover such a taint in our ancestry if we could trace it back far enough. And it is true that any of us might inherit some condition of the brain which would make us liable to insanity. But one's heredity is not a thing to worry about. Life is full of greater dangers. Nor in the opinion lounging about, reading and talking. They paid no attention to the visitors beyond an occasional glance and nod. None of them looked disturbed, and few even depressed.

This is not an attempt to whitewash the institution. It is a careful record of a layman's impressions. And it must be said that the insane do not seem to be, on the whole, any more troubled or any more disturbed than those on the other side of the high brick wall who are called sane. Out in the struggle for life, doubtless most of these would have been miserable, but in their own little world most of them are at ease.

Here and there is a case, notably depressed—a young man, for example, suffering from katatonie dementia praecox, who sits all day long staring blankly at nothing and never moving. His fingers and wrists are blue, showing poor circulation. He seems unaware of the doctor's presence, even when the latter puts an arm about his shoulders. There is something the matter with this man's brain, which deprives him of all mental reaction to his environment. Science does not know what is in his life sitting there, helpless and apathetic. Or he may recover, wholly or in part. There is nothing to do but make him comfortable and leave him alone.

And there are some men who suffer from tormenting delusions. Here, for example, is a great hulking fellow who sits looking suspiciously at his feet, which are bare, for he refuses to wear either shoes or socks. Every little while he cries softly, "Get away." There is a long silence, and then again "Get away!" He seems not to care. It is not an utterance in his tone. He speaks as one might speak to an annoying child or a too playful puppy. He has lived so long with these tormenting creatures of his sick brain that they are almost commonplace to him.

But these disturbed ones are few. For the most part the so-called crazy men sit about and read or talk, yawn and smile like other humans. There is nothing of the caped beast about them, nor yet the raving maniac. Even the disturbed war is remarkably free of real disturbance. It has also one of the great semi-circular assembly rooms at the end of a long corridor with dormitories on either side. Outside the assembly room is a wide veranda, like any other veranda, except that it has a screen of heavy wire, like a zoo cage. ## DENIES CARRANZA HAS RECALLED HIM

Ambassador Bonillas.

Ignacio Bonillas, Mexican ambassador to the United States, has just denied a rumor that he is to be recalled by President Carranza. He says he is optimistic regarding the future relations between Mexico and the United States. He declares the American people want no more war, and states that when they understand the situation in Mexico they will stop criticism.

Dr. Hassall, should the individual who has a psychopathic heredity, but is himself normal, hesitate to marry. Even those who have been insane and who have recovered, he thinks, have a perfect right to marry.

In support of the fact that many insane persons recover, Dr. Hassall cites the fact that about thirty per cent. of those who enter St. Elizabeth's hospital are discharged as cured. Out of 855 patients admitted one year, 245 were discharged as cured, and 105, after a short time, were discharged as not having been really insane at all.

These patients who were cured, it should be understood, were not mentally defective. Before they became afflicted with mental disease, they were persons of at least average intelligence. It is very necessary to distinguish between mental defect and insanity. A mentally defective person may be an idiot or an imbecile, or he may be one who, at the age of twenty, has, for example, only the intelligence of a boy of fourteen. Such an individual cannot be made normal and his children are almost sure to be mentally defective.

Here is a typical case of a man who recovered from insanity. A lawyer by profession, who has served in the army, he came to the hospital showing "all the classical text-book symptoms of dementia praecox," as one of the physicians put it. He fought wildly at all who tried to approach him, lay for days at a time with his eyes closed and had to be fed through a tube. Yet in a few months he became normal under careful treatment. He was examined and discharged. For four years now he has been practicing law. Not long ago he won the love of a woman and asked her to marry him. He did not conceal his history. He told her that he had been committed to an asylum as hopeless insane.

The woman, being a practical person, came to Washington and consulted the physician who had cared for her. The physician told her to go ahead and marry him. He said there was no more chance that this man would go crazy than any other, and that he had as good chance of becoming a sound and healthy citizen. This man is now successful both in his domestic and social life and in his profession.

While science is making good progress in diagnosing insanity, it is caring for insane patients, and in sympathetic understanding of them, it has made little progress toward discovering the basic causes of mental disease. Thus it is a moot question whether most forms of insanity are due to actual physical derangement of the brain and nervous system, or other parts of the body, or whether they are purely psychical in their nature. A case of dementia praecox often shows certain marked physical symptoms, such as impaired circulation. But it is hard to tell whether these physical conditions are the cause or an effect. Some psychiatrists believe that this disease is due to an actual physical lesion or weakness in the brain. Others believe that the brain does not undergo any physical change.

Science lacks a thorough knowledge of the physiology of psychopathic conditions, and in treating them it can proceed only by trial and error until more thorough knowledge is obtained.

One of the important things, according to the scientists, is to provide proper refuge both for mental defects and for persons suffering from mental disease. The defective should be permanently isolated, so that they may not commit crime and breed. The insane must be given comfortable homes, where they can recover if possible, and where otherwise they can live in comfort and do

He told her that he had been committed to an asylum as hopeless insane.

The woman, being a practical person, came to Washington and consulted the physician who had cared for her. The physician told her to go ahead and marry him. He said there was no more chance that this man would go crazy than any other, and that he had as good chance of becoming a sound and healthy citizen. This man is now successful both in his domestic and social life and in his profession.

While science is making good progress in diagnosing insanity, it is caring for insane patients, and in sympathetic understanding of them, it has made little progress toward discovering the basic causes of mental disease. Thus it is a moot question whether most forms of insanity are due to actual physical derangement of the brain and nervous system, or other parts of the body, or whether they are purely psychical in their nature. A case of dementia praecox often shows certain marked physical symptoms, such as impaired circulation. But it is hard to tell whether these physical conditions are the cause or an effect. Some psychiatrists believe that this disease is due to an actual physical lesion or weakness in the brain. Others believe that the brain does not undergo any physical change.

One of the important things, according to the scientists, is to provide proper refuge both for mental defects and for persons suffering from mental disease. The defective should be permanently isolated, so that they may not commit crime and breed. The insane must be given comfortable homes, where they can recover if possible, and where otherwise they can live in comfort and do

He fought wildly at all who tried to approach him, lay for days at a time with his eyes closed and had to be fed through a tube. Yet in a few months he became normal under careful treatment. He was examined and discharged. For four years now he has been practicing law. Not long ago he won the love of a woman and asked her to marry him. He did not conceal his history. During the war a man came to Washington from somewhere in the Allegheny mountains. He said that he was Jesus Christ, and that he had come to tell the president how to stop the war. It must be said for him that he looked the part. He had the long hair and the beard that Christ wears in most of his pictures and he had even much the same features, and the same expression with which most artists have endowed Christ. He was meek and lowly and obeyed literally the injunction to turn the other cheek when anyone hit him.

This man was middle-aged and had lived most of his life in some remote mountain community where he had apparently nourished his illusion that he was Christ without bothering anyone or being bothered. But how long would he have lasted in a modern city? He probably could not have made a living, and he would soon have been driven literally mad by ridicule. He was put in St. Elizabeth's where he went on being Christ in peace and to his own satisfaction.

This asylum has had patients who believed they were Christ and who got over the illusion and were discharged as cured, but such a delusion is generally incurable.

In the workshop at the asylum there is a short, rather good-looking chap with a black beard and moustache, who is an expert brush maker. Here he spends all his time industriously making brushes. It is against the rules that he should be allowed only a few can be used in the institution. Hence this man is simply accumulating brushes all about him. He has hair brushes, hat brushes, clothing brushes, scrubbing brushes, and every other kind of brush, fancy and plain, piled up about him in ever-growing mountains. He is very skillful at his work and seems to enjoy it. But he is peevish, like a spoiled child. He seems to believe that he is the victim of a conspiracy on the part of the government to get brushes for nothing.

If this man went into the city and set himself up in business, say as an expert, he could not get along. He would be quarrelsome, unstable and possibly dangerous. But it is conceivable that he might get along in some little country community, where his peculiarities were understood and humored. There are such men in most country communities.

Thus it all comes back to the fact that insanity is nothing more than a failure to make a successful adjustment to environment. And our civilized environment is becoming harder to adjust oneself to every day. That is why the insane present a problem of growing importance.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS LEADER ON WAY TO FRANCE TO WIND UP K. OF C. WAR WORK

William J. Mulligan and family photographed as they took steamer for France.

William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Knights of Columbus committee on war activities, left a few days ago for France, where he will direct the winding up of K. of C. wartime activities.

What geni are they that have crowded the last fifty years with so much of advantage to humans? They are legion in number, but not least among them is Advertising.

Our day is the greatest time the world has seen because we have more to be happy with, better things, greater variety, greater comforts gathered together from the North, East, West and South for our choosing and selection. Look about you. This is the day of better food, better homes, better clothing, better babies, better health, better business. And advertising is the instrument that makes these better things possible.

Advertising is the NEWS of all the looms, of all the furnaces, of all the laboratories, of all the shops, of all the stores, of all the world and all working for you.

Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once cost a king's ransom are yours at little prices. Advertising pits merchant against merchant, artisan against artisan, producer against producer, for your benefit, forcing out the best there is in everything and telling the world about it.

Read advertising. Keep abreast of today. Advertising furnishes you with facts and opportunities that you would otherwise never know.
